Have you replaced a condenser on any of the applications above, only to find that you are not getting the performance you expected? Well, gpd has the answer with our improved condenser that features eight rows of tubes for the transmission cooler, compared to other designs that only feature six. We also have designed more fins per square inch. The new condenser design has top and bottom support channels to keep it from flexing/twisting causing premature failure in the core. The flexing/twisting is caused from vibrations of the vehicle. Please see the pictures below of the quality condenser from gpd.
